EUCCHARISTIC ADORATION

It seems like nothing happens at Eucharistic Adoration. Sometimes there may be a prayer service with music, special lights or even incense, but at the center of it all there is a gilded monstrance holding a silent and still Host. There is nothing else to see there. Nothing, it seems, happens.

The lack of movements, change, and spectacle can, at times, make us feel uncertain and uncomfortable. By the eyes of faith, we see—or strain to see—this silent and still presence as the Lord Himself. Yet He is not doing anything, so we suppose we must. What are we supposed to do at Eucharistic Adoration? How do we do this right? How do we make this prayer count?

Over time you may find that it is actually preoccupation that gets in the way of adoring the Lord. We might be very used to activity, to many things happening at once, and to a steady diet of variety and fluctuation. Therefore, the concern over “what to do” at Eucharistic Adoration is a symptom of attachment to the constant hustle and bustle of the world. The Blessed Sacrament does not conform to those ways. (continued in next bulletin)
